Britain's best supermarkets use AiroFresh to lift produce quality

Airofresh Intl Pty Ltd, a leading provider of air purification solutions is working with Britain's largest supermarkets to improve produce quality for their customers and staff.

Indoor air quality has become increasingly important, and Airofresh Intl technology is designed to remove airborne contaminants, including odours, bacteria, viruses, and other harmful particles, creating a cleaner and healthier environment for produce storage.

Over the past 3 years, AM Fresh has rolled out AiroFresh into its existing produce stores and this year has installed units in the newly built Fusion House facility which is one of the UK's largest produce facilities.

"AiroFresh is working with Britain's largest supermarkets to improve produce quality."

"We are excited to be working with AM Fresh who supply the majority of Tesco & Marks and Spencer's fresh fruit," said Dr Mike Woodrow, Airofresh Intl's international business manager. "Our technology has helped them deliver the highest level of indoor air quality, which is particularly important in produce storage where cleanliness and hygiene are of utmost importance."

The Airofresh Intl technology uses a unique air processing methodology which eliminates harmful contaminants without the use of chemicals. The system doesn't rely on physical filters and is energy-efficient and easy to maintain.

"We are committed to providing the best possible produce outcomes for our customers, and the use of the Airofresh Intl technology is an important step in that direction," said Dr Woodrow. "We believe that this technology will help to create a cleaner and healthier environment for everyone who enters our stores."

The partnership with major grocery retailers in the UK is just one example of Airofresh Intl's commitment to improving indoor air quality in a variety of settings. Their technology is also used in medical facilities, schools, and offices, providing effective solutions that promote health and safety.
